The jug that jogs the memory

The George III silver wine jug sold by Tennants in Leyburn in March is the exact pair to another the auction house offered on behalf of a different vendor two years ago.

Both 11in (28cm), 36oz pieces, with marks for Thomas Heming, London, 1765, have a common previous owner in Major General Henry Aylmer (1813-1904), although it appears they became separated more than a century ago when inherited by his two sons.

While one stayed in the UK to be sold by Tennants in May 2021 for £20,000 (plus 20% buyer's premium), the other had made its way to Canada.

Revealed: Ivory Act exemptions so far

by Laura Chesters

Following a Freedom of Information Request by Antiques Trade Gazette, the agency charged with administering The Ivory Act has issued some data on the controversial law.

The Animal Plant Health Agency (APHA) said that since the act – a near-total ban on selling antique ivory – came into force in June 2022, a total of 5388 antiques containing ivory have been registered prior to sale under the de minimus and portrait miniature exemptions. A further 91 items have been granted certificates as items of 'outstandingly high artistic, cultural and historical value' with 29 objects rejected under the same criteria.

The exemptions

However, what the statistical information does not reveal is how decisions are made.

Dealers seek refunds after fair cancellation

by Laura Chesters

Dealers who had planned to stand at the Antique Home & Vintage Fair in York have been attempting to receive a refund for deposits paid to organiser Richard Cawood after the event was cancelled.

A number of dealers have contacted ATG and Trading Standards about the situation.

The event ran triannually with the next edition scheduled for March before it was cancelled in January this year when a note posted on its website said: “The Antique Home & Vintage Fair at York, Beverley and Pocklington is no longer in operation.”

Trading Standards and York council have urged dealers who are out of pocket to contact Citizens Advice.

Matthew Boxall, head of public protection at City of York Council, said: “We have received two complaints from people who said they paid for a stall at an antiques fair that didn’t go ahead and are yet to get a refund.

“As ever we encourage people to contact Citizens Advice consumer helpline on 0808 223 1133 to report concerns and ask for advice and support on the options available to them. Citizens Advice pass details of complaints to trading standards for information and can lead to further enquiries being made.”

The fair at York Racecourse, which attracted around 100 traders, was previously run by the late Reg Frost of Selby Antiques Fairs.

Cawood had worked with

Frost on the fair since 2016 and took over after he died in 2018.

Cawood then relaunched the event in 2020 and at the same time launched a smaller series of antiques and vintage fairs in East Yorkshire, at nearby Pocklington in the Pocklington Arts Centre and in Beverley.

Cawood did not respond to ATG’s numerous requests for comment.

Taylor steps down from Gorrings’s managing partner role

Philip Taylor is stepping down as managing partner of East Sussex auction house Gorrings’s.

Taylor has worked at the firm for 45 years and will remain as a partner within the business.

Clifford Lansberry, who joined the firm in 1999, has been appointed managing partner.

Alongside these changes at the Lewes saleroom is the promotion to associate partner for valuer Dan Bray and auctioneer and valuer Joseph Trinder.

Saleroom helps to seal Jane Austen letter deal for museum in author’s Hampshire home

Cambridge collector who had acquired it 22 years ago from London dealer Bernard Quaritch. It is one of only around 160 Jane Austen letters to survive and is among the earliest in existence.

The fact that many of Jane’s letters to her sister were destroyed by Cassandra two or three years before her own death means survivors such as this are few and far between.

The letter has now gone on display at the museum following its acquisition via the Acceptance in Lieu scheme, settling £140,000 in tax.

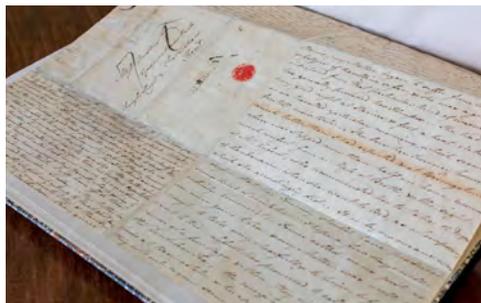

The price is roughly in line with another autograph letter sold at Bonhams New York for a record $160,000 (£124,000) in 2019.

Family wish

Director at Cheffins Martin Millard said: “The letter had come to us from the estate of a local Cambridge resident, who had acquired it in 2000 to add to a small, but deftly invested, collection.

“It was the family’s wish and our recommendation that the letter go to Jane Austen’s House, and we are pleased to have brokered this transaction on behalf of our client.”

Jane wrote the letter from Steventon Rectory, the Austen family home in Hampshire, on 27-28 October 1798. At the time Cassandra was staying at Godmersham Park in Kent, the home of their brother Edward.

Above left: the Jane Austen letter to her sister Cassandra which has been acquired by Jane Austen’s House, settling £140,000 in tax.

Images: Luke Shears

Above right: Jane Austen’s House in Chawton, Hampshire, is now a museum open to the public.

The letter offers an insight into Austen’s social circle, domestic life and the realities of travel in the late 18th century, all written with Austen’s engaging and frequently biting wit. Martin Millard of Cheffins described it as “lively, vivid, funny and a brilliant window into her personality”.

In the letter she fills her sister in on the local news, commenting somewhat savagely: “Mrs Hall of Sherbourn was brought to bed yesterday of a dead child, some weeks before she expected, owing to a fright. I suppose she happened unawares to look at her husband...”

With her mother ill in bed upstairs, Jane announces her new status in the household with mocking self-importance: “I am very grand indeed... I carry about the keys of the Wine & Closet; twice since I began this letter, have had orders to give in the kitchen: Our dinner was very good yesterday, & the Chicken boiled perfectly tender; therefore I shall not be obliged to dismiss Nanny on that account...”

And with whimsical affectation, she wrote: “Next week (I) shall begin my operations on my hat, on which you know my principal hopes of happiness depend.”

Image: Luke Shears

A long, chatty and typically witty autograph letter (signed with her initials), it was written across four pages on a single large folio folded three times. It retains the address panel, postmark and a trace of the red wax seal.

The letter was among the manuscripts bequeathed by Cassandra to Jane’s niece, Fanny, Lady Knatchbull, and it was then inherited by Fanny’s son, Lord Brabourne, in 1882, who later published it in his edition of the Letters of Jane Austen.

Jane Austen’s House in Chawton, which has been a museum since 1949, was her home for the last eight years of her life. The letter is currently part of its new exhibition titled My dear Cassandra...

It is estimated that Jane wrote 3000 letters in her lifetime. A total of 95 of the 160 surviving letters were written to Cassandra. Of those that remain, around a third are now in the Morgan Library in New York while Jane Austen’s House now holds 16 letters written by her as well as others by her close family.

Christopher Bishop takes over Master Drawings New York and new board appointed Master Drawings New York (MDNY) has a new owner, advisory board and partnership.

Christopher Bishop Fine Art (CBFA), an Old Master, Modern and Contemporary art dealership in New York, has bought the event which takes place across two dozen Upper East Side galleries in January.

Founding owners

It was founded by art dealers Crispian Riley-Smith and Margot Gordon, who launched the event in 2006.

Riley-Smith said: "It is time for this marquee New York event to benefit from New York-based leadership." He launched a new venture, Art Advisory Group, last year. Bishop, a former advisory board member who has been with the fair for 10 years, said he plans to foster "the strengths of the show while taking it to the next level".

The dealer started in his new role as president of MDNY last week.

Cydney Williams, associate director of the same gallery, has been named director of the event. An advisory board comprising former and new board members will support CBFA with the running of the event.

The committee includes Stephen

Ongpin, Cliff Schorer of Agnews Works on Paper, Jill Newhouse and Alan Salz of Didier Aaron.

Meanwhile, CBFA has announced a new partnership for the event with The Drawing Foundation, a New York-based not-for-profit organisation due to launch this summer, which is dedicated to host and promote drawings-related events, scholarship and study.

The dealership has pledged one third of the gross revenue of MDNY to the foundation on an ongoing annual basis for a minimum of five years.

Ivory Act system has 'more big holes than a Swiss cheese'

containing ivory can be exempt from the ban under four narrow conditions. These are:

- Pre-1947 items containing less than 10% ivory by volume.
- Pre-1975 musical instruments containing less than 20% ivory by volume.
- Pre-1918 portrait miniatures with a surface area of no more than 320 sq cm.
- Pre-1918 items deemed of outstanding artistic, cultural or historical value.

The registration process for de minimis and portrait miniature exemptions costs £20 per item or £50 for a group of objects (up to a maximum of 20). Owners wishing to sell a pre-1918 ivory item of outstanding artistic, cultural or historical value must pay a fee of £250 and submit details to a committee of museum specialists for assessment.

Currently the system is opaque. Many people in the trade argue a publicly available register would help in understanding what does and does not qualify for certification.

The idea was mooted during parliamentary debates in June 2018 when David Cowdrey, head of policy and campaigns at the International Fund for Animal Welfare (IFAW) and Will Travers, president of Born Free Foundation, argued for a "public register... [as] seeing what has been sold for what amount is critical".

Database demand

Michael Baggott, a silver dealer who has campaigned passionately against the Ivory Act, said: "The failing with the system itself is that there is no available list of exempted items, the criteria they were passed on, and more importantly, the criteria on which those failing the process were denied. The public and trade at large are still completely in the dark. An online illustrated searchable database of all submissions (denied and approved) with the deciding experts names permanently attached to their decisions seems the very least that is required."

According to APHA data, of the 120 applications made since June under the 'artistic, cultural and historical value' exemption, a quarter were rejected.

The 91 certificates issued in 10 months is in line with estimates outlined in 2018.

Cowdrey and Travers said that they had been "told that this [exemption] is only for exceptional items - we are anticipating 75 to 150 a year".

Baggott stated that those registering items still require guidelines when assessing whether or not an antique contains less than 10% ivory.

He added: "In practice it appears the government, with its new act, is operating a system based entirely on trust with more big holes in it than a wheel of Swiss cheese.

"This is against the option of having kept the original 1975 CITES guidelines (which were both less onerous on the antiques trade but also much more protective of historic works of art) and policing them with an expert body drawn from specialists and law enforcement."

Strangely familiar... pair to wine jug found and then sold at same auction house

Above: a detail of the base showing the hallmarks and a presentation inscription added in 1936.

As detailed by an engraved inscription to the base, it was given by Henry Adolphus Paget Aylmer (1876-1959) to John Sigerist Blanshard Pemberton and his wife Margaret Alexandra, née Cleghorn, on their wedding day in Westmount, Montreal, on February 11, 1936.

Tennants' specialist Jeffrey Lassaline had been delighted to receive an email last year from their descendants in Canada who had recently received news of the earlier sale. They chose to consign their inheritance to the Yorkshire sale of Fine Jewellery, Watches and Silver on March 18 where, estimated at £7000-10,000, it sold to a UK private buyer at £15,000 (plus 22% buyer's premium). As it had been imported under the Temporary Admission scheme, a further VAT of 5% was due on the hammer price and 20% on the buyer's premium.

The exact purpose of Georgian silver pear-shaped jugs is sometimes unclear although most are called ale jugs. However, we can say with some confidence that these jugs were made for wine rather than beer as the cast and chased decoration includes swags of fruiting vines.

Thomas Heming's trade card from the 1760s-70s, part of a cache of Georgian cards donated by Ambrose Heal to the British Museum, depicts a jug (of a different form) with the same distinctive ornament.

Only a small number of fully identifiable Georgian wine jugs are known to survive, with pairs a great rarity.

Austere Moorcroft catches the eye

The series of relatively austere wares made by Moorcroft in the 1930s are, today at least, not the factory's most commercial designs.

However, these pared-back Art Deco tube-lined designs were well received in Paris at the time. Moorcroft won a gold medal at the famous 1925 Exposition Internationale des Arts Décoratifs et Industriels Modernes – the event that gave Art Deco its name – and took further accolades at the international expo in 1937. A vase from the 1937 exhibition was offered at Fieldings of Stourbridge as part of the Decades of Design sale on March 16.

Measuring just shy of 20in (50cm), it assumes a swollen tapering form that is decorated in the salt glazed Waving Corn pattern.

To the base is the hand-painted mark Made for the Paris Exhibition 1937 plus a paper label for the Moorcroft Museum. Fieldings was selling more than 100 lots from the archives of W Moorcroft Ltd. The collection, still displayed in the original Liberty & Co oak cabinets that William Moorcroft originally used at the 1924 British Empire Exhibition in Wembley, is being thinned out to allow for the arrival of new pieces.

These duplicates or trial pieces, carrying paper labels for the Moorcroft Museum begun by founder William Moorcroft in 1913, were given affordable estimates from £30-1500.

Estimated at £500-800, this monumental vase took £4900 (plus 25% buyer's premium inclusive of VAT) from a bidder via thesaleroom.com. A more typical example of the Waving Corn pattern, a 13in (32cm) high cylindrical form vase, sold at £220.

Another vase to generate serious competition from the same consignment was also an exhibition piece: a massive 2ft 3in (66cm) tapering baluster form decorated in a streaked flambé glaze with copper green and purple patches and spotting.

Devoid of Moorcroft's trademark tube lining, it is again indicative of the more experimental wares of the 1930s, this one carrying a paper label for the Royal Academy Exhibition of British Art in Industry 1935.

Estimated at £400-600, it took £4600.

A taste of what's to come in auctions

Christie's has relaunched its biannual auction series of decorative arts sales to run concurrently online in three cities: London, New York and Paris.

The sales will open for bidding on April 4, closing sequentially on April 18, 19 and 20 in London, New York and Paris. Comprising more than 600 lots in total, The Collector sales series features European, English and 19th century furniture, works of art, silver, ceramics, glass, clocks and gold boxes from the 16th to the 20th century.

The auction house has teamed up with designers and event producers Jane Schulak and David Stark, described by Christie's as the Tastemakers of the sales series, to help put together the auctions.

The pre-sale exhibitions will be held ahead of the auctions with the London view taking place on April 11-18.

Nick Sims, Christie's global managing director of Classic Art, said: "I am delighted that in response to demand in this category, we have improved the format of this important sale series to reflect the international buying needs of our clients."

Ocean liner Art Deco surfaces in saleroom

When RMS Queen Mary was launched in 1934 it was not only at the cutting edge of technology but also featured some of the grandest interior designs ever seen aboard an ocean liner.

The Art Deco designs oozed elegance and glamour alongside function and modernity.

Among them was a series of relief groups created by Maurice Lambert (1901-64), who by the mid-1930s was rated with Moore, Hepworth, Skeaping and Dobson as one of the leading new group of sculptors, although later as professor of sculpture at the Royal Academy he was seen as a more conventional artist.

An example of his striking design has been consigned to Wiltshire auction house Henry Aldridge & Son for the April 22 sale.

Measuring 5ft x 21in (1.52m x 53.5cm) and executed by Sterling Foundries Of The Birmingham Qualcast Group, it was installed in the travel bureau on board the main deck.

Originally one of a pair both symbolising 'Speed and Progress', the port side panel showing the express train Silver Jubilee behind a galloping centaur is now lost to time. However, this panel depicts a stylised DH86 Imperial Airways aircraft with Pegasus alongside.

It has featured in DM Hinkey's The Art of the RMS Queen Mary, 1994, and exhibitions at Miottel Museum in California, London's Victoria and Albert Museum (Ocean Liners: Speed and Style, 2018) and the Peabody Essex Museum in Massachusetts.

The estimate in the Devizes auction is £25,000-30,000.

Footprint design telling a story of lost love stars among a selection of ‘out of the ordinary’ collectables lots sold at auction.

By Tom Derbyshire and Roland Arkell

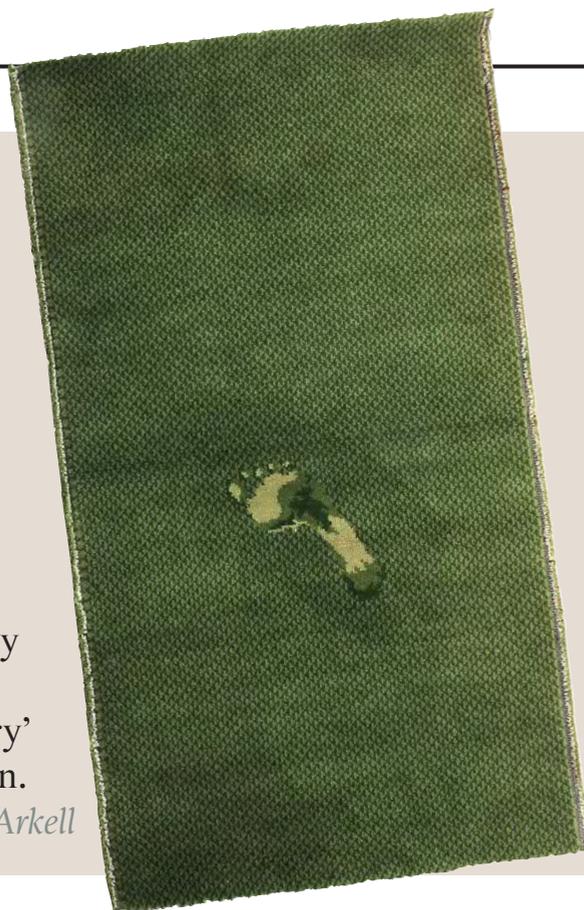

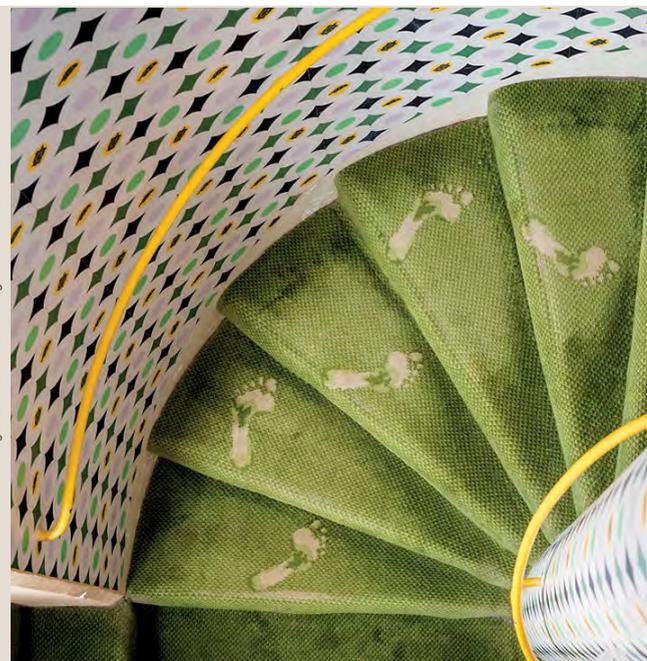

Image: © West Dean College of Arts and Conservation/Chris Ison

Les Ballets was a ballet season put on in Paris in 1933 and financed by Edward James, the millionaire and sponsor of the Surrealists.

It was staged partly to win back his wife, the famous dancer Tilly Losch. However, although she did decide to take part she left him again afterwards.

A lot sold at Sworders’ (25% buyer’s premium) Out of the Ordinary auction on February 7 including two large, rare posters and a programme for Les Ballets also featured an intriguing 2ft 11in x 15in (90 x 38cm) section of carpet designed with Losch’s footprint.

After that 1933 season, the whole company were invited to West Dean, James’ large country house near Chichester in Sussex. It had become a centre for Surrealism supporting artists such as Magritte and Dalí (and is now home to the West Dean College of Arts and Conservation, which James founded).

James saw Losch’s footprints going up the stairs in Monkton House, his private residence on the West Dean estate, after she came out of the bath. He had the image woven into a carpet designed by him in collaboration with interior designer Norris Wakefield. The college says it is “significant as an early example of James’ commissioning of Surrealist interiors”.

The piece offered at Sworders was a trial for the finished carpet.

One story goes that when Losch left James he had another carpet commissioned for another house on the estate with the feet replaced with the paws of his wolfhound.

The footprint carpet was subsequently moved to West Dean House when the couple divorced in 1934. It can be seen on the spiral staircase in West Dean college.

Austrian dancer, choreographer, actress, and painter Losch had married James in 1930.

One of the posters shows a dramatic image of Losch wearing the huge dress designed by Russian-born Surrealist painter Pavel Tchelitchew, who also created the poster.

The items were all gifted to the consignor here by the artist and designer Martin Battersby.

The carpet had minor edge wear, the programme some loose pages and rust to the staples, and the posters – the largest 4ft x 2ft 7in (1.2m x 80cm) – had foxing and some tears.

Estimated at £700-900, the lot sold for £4200 in Stansted Mountfitchet, Essex. Sworders said: “It was purchased over the phone by a private UK collector with a very specific interest in Edward James. He told us that he’d previously been collecting all manner of items relating to James, and mounted several exhibitions relating to him.”

Iron Lady

Memorabilia given to Margaret Thatcher but found in a waste disposal site in London 20 years ago formed part of the auction.

“The collection came to us from someone whose father had owned a storage company during the 1980s, and helped move Margaret Thatcher out of No 10 in November 1990,” said Otto Billstrom, 20th century design specialist at Sworders.

“Her people put these pieces in storage, it was probably forgotten about, and our vendor’s father ended up salvaging them when they were sent for disposal a decade later.”

Of particular note was a large 22in (56cm) bronzed plaster bust of President Ronald Reagan purportedly presented to Thatcher by ‘the Gipper’ as a gift during the state visit in 1982. Estimated at £500-700, it made £9000 online.

An (unsigned) oil painting of the Iron Lady seated in blue dress on a green armchair carried a brass plaque detailing its presentation From a true friend and admirer with sincere best wishes on your birthday, 13th October 1995. The dedication was signed by Prof Bacharuddin Jusuf Habibie, a minister and future prime minister of Indonesia. It took £1100.

Another lot comprised a walnut box bearing a plaque inscribed Presented to Former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on the occasion of Her visit to Bellingham International Airport, March 15 1991. It was offered together with a (more commercially attractive) photograph presented to Thatcher by the SAS after the storming of the Iranian embassy at the end of the siege in 1980. The framed photo of the PM flanked by three soldiers in gas masks holding assault rifles is inscribed To Mrs Margaret Thatcher From 22 SAS Regt. The two items sold for £1500.

Sworders said the Thatcher lots were “bought privately by an individual who had some personal ties to Mrs Thatcher, from where the bust once came. Margaret Thatcher memorabilia is an interesting field, as people who collect the pieces either had some form of personal connection to her, or are devoted sympathisers with her (and incidentally Ronald Reagan’s) politics, and the buyer here falls into that demographic.”

Sworders has been holding its Out of the Ordinary auctions since 2018. Head of sale Mark Wilkinson said they “continue to grow and evolve. However, they are a sale that needs to be carefully curated so there is balance within the sections and the sales are not too large. It’s very easy to take in too much of one category, like taxidermy for instance.

“Our annual February sale this year got the balance spot on with a good mix of high-quality unusual art and collectables with also some craziness throughout.

“The market is looking for the unusual, which these sales supply in spades. We have, however, learnt over the years what does sell and what does not, or what is just too weird.

“The Out of the Ordinary sales are far from the highest turnover auctions for Sworders, but they do constantly create more free columns of press editorial than any other sale.” ■

Above right: the footprint was offered at Swords with two posters (one shown) and a programme of Les Ballets in a lot that made £4200.

Sex Pistols on the cusp of success

On November 26, 1976, the Sex Pistols released their first single, Anarchy in the UK. The month before, on October 15, they had played at Erics in Liverpool, watched by only around 50 people.

A simple poster made to promote the gig (below right) turned up at a house in north Lincolnshire. Estimated at £750-1000 on March 15 at Hansons (25% buyer's premium) in Etwell, Derbyshire, it sold at £1450 via thesaleroom.com.

Its survival was down to retired musician Martin Watson, 67. In 1976 he was a guitarist with Albert Dock, later the Yachts, support band at the Pistols' gig at Erics.

He said: "The poster has been sitting under lining paper in a drawer for the last 47 years. I came across it during a clear-out. I have lots of memorabilia from my seven years in New Wave bands in the 1970s and 80s."

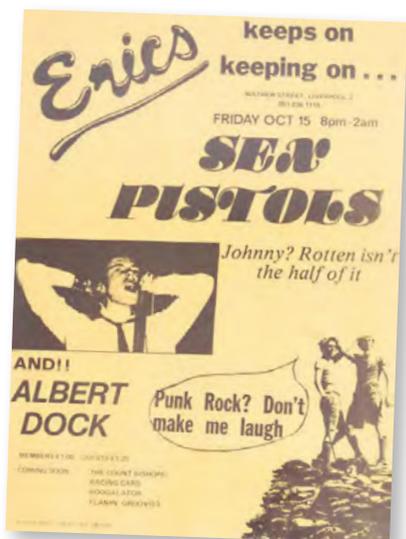

The Pistols' gig may have been small but attracted the likes of Holly Johnson and Paul Rutherford, both later of Frankie Goes to Hollywood, and the late Pete Burns of Dead or Alive.

The poster, which measures 11½ x 8½in (29.5 x 21cm), includes a photo taken by Watson of Albert Dock/Yachts members John Campbell and Henry Priestman standing on a rock. It was snapped during an art college trip to the Lake District.

Claire Howell, music memorabilia consultant at Hansons, said: "This is a very important piece of Pistols and punk history.

"I'm aware of only one other original Erics Sex Pistols poster and it sold for £900 at auction in 2008.

first time, and on October 8, just a week before the gig at Erics, the group signed to the label.

"Days before the gig the band recorded an early version of Anarchy in the UK. Several gigs followed from October 12 with shows in Dundee, Wolverhampton and Birkenhead before Liverpool. The Pistols were on the cusp of making it big."

Shipwreck souvenir

La Lutine, launched by the French in 1779 and later requisitioned into the Royal Navy, is today best known for its sinking.

When the 5th-rate ship of 38 guns was wrecked on a bank near Vlieland, Holland, in 1799 she had a vast fortune in gold and silver aboard. The majority of the cargo was never recovered from the shifting sands and Lloyds's of London paid out in full.

She became something of an emblem for the insurance market. A representation of La Lutine was incorporated into the Lloyd's crest and the ship's bell brought to the London headquarters and struck when news of an overdue ship arrived.

During one of several salvage missions conducted for the underwriters, in 1859 La Lutine's oak rudder was recovered. The majority of the timber was used to make a boardroom desk and a chair plus a series of trinkets – such as this 13in (33cm) diameter Victorian standish carved with dolphin supporters, the arms for the City of London and the inscription La Lutine 1799.

It was offered by Lay's (18% buyer's premium) in Penzance. Estimated at £150-200 on February 16, it took £2500.

A number of these are known. One offered by Charles Miller in 2008 with a silver plaque stating it had been made from the ship's rudder sold at £2200 and it was a similar sum of money required to purchase the slightly larger example sold in Cornwall.

Roland Arkell

Right: Lafayette US tour glove 1824 plus letter of provenance, £750 at Catherine Southon.

Hands of history

The visit of 'Revolutionary Wars' hero Gilbert du Motier, the Marquis of Lafayette, to the US in 1824 spawned a large number of commemoratives.

This rare white kid leather glove carries printed portrait medallions of George Washington and Lafayette, captioned Lafayette – Grateful Welcome to the Friend of our Illustrious Washington, Duty entered According to Act of Congress.

It came for sale with an old letter of provenance inscribed Lafayette Glove, Presented to George Starbuck by Mrs. Myers, who received it from the United States of America – I believe. Mrs. Myers is the wife of one of the Ministers.

This glove, a type often worn by women who met Lafayette during his tour, came for sale via Catherine Southon (20% buyer's premium) at Farleigh Court Golf Club, Selsdon, Surrey, on February 8 with an estimate of £400-600 and made £750.

It was part of a remarkable archive of material from descendants of the Starbuck family, a Quaker whaling family influential in both the abolitionist movement and the founding of Nantucket as a whaling centre.

Loyalist members of the family emigrated to Milford Haven in Pembrokeshire after independence. Leading the archive was the 60-page album of early 19th century correspondence compiled by prominent abolitionist Samuel Starbuck. Featured in ATG No 2580, it took £23,000.

Aircraft models were a cut above

by Tom Derbyshire

Beautiful construction, rarity and interesting history combined to make a British-made cutaway model sought after in a Canadian auction.

Offered at Miller & Miller (18% buyer's premium) of New Hamburg, Ontario, the model based on a 1962 Vickers VC-10 BOAC jet plane was made by Walker's Westway of London.

One of only two of these 7ft 4in long x 5ft 10in wide x 5ft 1in high overall (2.24 x 1.78 x 1.55m) models known, it sold on January 21 for Can$16,000 (£9600) against an estimate of Can$9000-12,000. The other, in not such good condition, was sold at a Californian auction some time ago for an unknown price.

Atlantic record

The Vickers VC-10 achieved a record for the fastest crossing of the Atlantic by a subsonic jet airliner of 5 hours and 1 minute. That record stood for 41 years until February 2020 when a British Airways Boeing 747 achieved 4 hours 56 minutes – up to then it had only ever been beaten for speed by the supersonic Concorde.

The VC-10 was in service from 1962-81 with airlines all over the world and continued to fly with the RAF until 2013 for a service history totalling 50 years. In fact, many Concorde flight crew actually earned the vast majority of their hours in the sky on the VC-10.

Miller & Miller said: "This beautiful model was shipped to a travel agency in eastern Ontario in 1963. In those days, the aircraft was the destination, but the folks lucky enough to afford a jet airliner ticket had to somehow be shown just how luxurious this brand-new aircraft really was in an era where few people owned TV sets.

"This was the very dawn of the Jet Age, and long before air travel was commonplace. People dressed up to fly and were served world-class meals by stewardesses in white gloves, on the finest of silverware. Thus, it became a standard airline industry marketing practice to woo customers by showing off cutaway models of their most exciting (and brand new) jets. Only the highest performing travel agencies were given the privilege of being 'loaned' these models."

In November 1963 this model was stored away for safe-keeping in the attic of the travel agency by the owner but it seems BOAC forgot about it. The auction house says when the building was sold in December 2012 it was actually rediscovered by the same man who put it there.

Walk this Westway

Walker's Westway has an interesting background. Active from 1942-57 as bespoke model aircraft maker to the aircraft/airline industries, it was started in East Acton by Ian Walker, a man famous in the motor-racing world in the 1950s-60s, particularly with Lotus.

It seems he acquired the Merit plastics company which made a range of plastic model kits of 1950s-60s racing cars. Walker's Westway developed, possibly as a way of bankrolling the motor racing.

A wonderful British Pathé short film about the firm can be viewed at britishpathe.com/video/industrial-models.

Early example of Donald Duck

On June 9, 1934, Donald Duck made his debut in a supporting role in a Silly Symphony cartoon titled The Wise Little Hen. He went on to become one of Disney's most recognisable and popular cartoon characters.

Merchandise was available from very early on. A large composition wall plaque (right) of rectangular form, 2ft 11in x 23½in (90 x 60cm), offered at Bushey Auctions (20% buyer's premium) of Hertfordshire on February 23 was surely one of the first examples produced.

Not only did it portray Donald with a longer neck and beak – how the character was depicted at first – but it had a notable provenance.

Richard Kluk from the auction room said: "The lot was consigned from a private home in north-west London. It was purchased in the 1930s by the vendor's grandparents to hang in the nursery. It was then passed onto the vendor when her mother passed away last year."

Disney collectors certainly spotted it and "from the time the catalogues were live on the online platforms we replied to 34 condition requests".

After a bidding battle between the internet and two phones it sold online for £3000 – 10 times the top estimate – to a US collector of Walt Disney memorabilia.

Alluring ad looks good at £2100

This polychrome advertising plaque (right) features a portrait of Ninon de L'Enclos, a notorious courtesan who scandalised France by numerous affairs with prominent statesmen and church notables.

Desirability and allure is presumably why she was chosen to promote Rowland's Kalydor for the Complexion cream.

The plaque is a rare mid-19th century item made by TJ & J Mayer of Longport, Burslem in the Potteries, a commercial rival to F&R Pratt of Fenton, the leading manufacturer of pot lids and a huge range of related ware.

The Mayer firm took part in the British exhibitions of 1851, 1853 and 1855, winning a medal at the 1851 Great Exhibition.

With impressed marks to the reverse, the 5½ x 7½in (13.5 x 19.5cm) plaque was offered in the Jewellery & Collectables auction at Cardiff saleroom Rogers Jones (20% buyer's premium) on February 21.

The lot also included a pair of Majolica candlesticks with all-over floral decoration, cylindrical columns and stepped square bases; a slip glazed terracotta stand; and a prattware type pot lid for The Sportsman, the base for Silkshave soap.

Estimated at £60-100, the lot made £2100 from an online bidder.

In October last year at Cotswolds auction house Kinghams, a Mayer advertising plaque for Rowland's Odonto, a tooth-whitening product, took a hammer price of £3400 (see ATG No 2565).

Small stuff but a big result

Many animals stuffed by taxidermists stand out as fierce beasts that could easily have turned on the hunters themselves.

It is likely that Fairy was not among them, however.

The Pomeranian-type puppy who lived for less than a year was said to have been the smallest dog in Bristol.

Immortalised standing on a red velvet cushion (below), he or she was only about 5in (12cm) long, according to the catalogue description for the Mendip Auction Rooms (18% buyer's premium) sale on March 11 in Binegar, Somerset.

Fairy stood within a glazed display case about 12in (30cm) long with a commemorative brass plaque engraved FAIRY/ BORN SEPT 1ST 1930 - DIED FEBY 3RD 1931 and related provenance information.

The miniscule canine was bred by a Miss Wells of College Green, Bristol. She lived with a menagerie of animals, many of whom were stuffed and donated to Bristol Museum on their death.

Small maybe, but Fairy – perhaps a Teacup Pomeranian – made a big price of £3100 from a bidder on thesaleroom.com against an estimate of £250-350.

Apology from Beatle Harrison

A letter of apology written by George Harrison after two autograph-hunting schoolgirls got a distinctly unfriendly reception when they turned up on the doorstep of his home took £6100 at auction.

James Laverack of John Taylors (18% buyer's premium) in Louth, Lincolnshire, said: "The find chronicles a tiff in which the Beatle found himself entangled soon after moving into Kinfauns, the bungalow that he had bought on the Claremont Park Estate at Esher in Surrey in 1964.

"The estate's big house, an 18th century former royal mansion just across the park, was then a private girls' school and it was two of their pupils who arrived unannounced on Harrison's doorstep.

"It would seem they got a frosty reception from the woman who answered the door. Not only did she make it clear to the girls that their visit was not welcome but she then telephoned the school to make a complaint – which is when the balloon rather went up. Messages were flying between the school, the parents and Kinfauns."

Harrison's letter to the mother of Claire Braham, one of the schoolgirls involved, calmed things down. He explained that it was a daily help who had phoned the school and that he had known nothing about it until the following day. He asked Mrs Braham to tell Claire that he was sorry – and sent her an autograph.

Laverack said: "In addition he wrote that 'John' had now signed Melanie's [the other girl] book and she was welcome to call the following week to collect it. When she did call she not only got her book but an autographed photograph – and George posed with her for a snap.

"Melanie died recently and it was during the clearance of her home in Louth that this extraordinary little cache of Beatles memorabilia was discovered – Harrison's letter, the envelope in which it was sent, the autographed photograph and the snap of the Beatle and the schoolgirl at Kinfauns."

The estimate for the lot (left) was £2500-3000 in the March 14 auction.

First 007 film still a thriller

In the 007 collecting scene Dr No (1962) is usually the film poster buyers are most keen to say yes to.

That will, of course, come at a cost. In April 2021 Surrey saleroom Ewbank's sold a British quad size poster, 2ft 6in x 3ft 4in (76cm x 1.02m), for the first Bond film at £16,000.

In good condition, with no folds, the price showed the kind of demand these days for the classic posters designed by Mitchell Hooks.

On March 7, in Ewbank's (25% buyer's premium) dedicated James Bond auction, another came up which was in 'generally good condition' for its age, with strong, bright colours, but some damage to corners and edges and fold marks.

Estimated at £5000-8000, this example (above) was bought by a Yorkshire collector for £17,500.

The Dr No poster was consigned by a gentleman in south-west London who had owned it from the 1970s and had no idea of the value.

Rod Stewart on road to stardom

Shown here is the original 15ips (inches per second) tape of, by repute, Rod Stewart's first recording on June 18, 1964, together with a second copy.

The track list comprises Just Like I Treat You, Moppers Blues, Bright Lights Big City, Keep Your Hands Off Her, Don't Tell Nobody, Ain't That Loving You Baby and Worksong.

It was consigned to Cheffins (29.4% buyer's premium inc VAT) of Cambridge by Jonathan Rowlands who, along with co-producer Geoff Wright, worked with Stewart in his early career.

Accompanied by photocopied pages of Rowlands' 1964 appointment book, detailing his meetings with Stewart, the lot estimated at £500-1000 made £3400 on February 23.

First contract

Rowlands said: "Together with a second tape, these were to be used as audition tapes for a future recording contract for Rod. As musicians, we used Long John Baldry's Hoochie Coochie Band, led by pianist Ian Armit. The recording engineer was Vic Keery.

"It was recorded at Pepsi Rush's basement studio (below Joe Mazins bookshop) at 42 Berwick Street, London W1. On the tape you can hear Rod saying 'there is somebody knocking on the floor trying to get in!

"With my then partner Geoff Wright, we then sent the tape to Decca Records as an audition recording in June 1964. The tape was heard by A&R man Mike Vernon at Decca on June 24 and the result was we obtained Rod's first recording contract with Decca Records.

"The first single released then by Decca was Good Morning Little Schoolgirl."

Busby Babe Berry remembered

In one way, Johnny Berry (1926-94) was luckier than many of Manchester United's Busby Babes: he survived the Munich air disaster on February 6, 1958, that killed many of his teammates.

However, his injuries ended the first-team regular's career at the age of 31. By that time, the right winger had played a part in all three of United's league titles of the 1950s, a feat equalled only by team captain Roger Byrne, who died at Munich.

When Berry came round in hospital, he had amnesia and could not remember the crash. Having suffered a fractured skull, broken jaw, broken elbow, broken pelvis and broken leg, the doctors kept news of the fatalities from him until he had sufficiently recovered his strength. It was another month before he learnt about the fate of his teammates, including the death of his close friend Tommy Taylor.

Family consignment

Berry's family consigned his Man U medals for auction at Ewbank's (25% buyer's premium) in Surrey on February 24.

They included his 1951-52 League Division One Championship medal – his first for United – in gold and silver gilt, estimated at £15,000-25,000. That medal took £22,000, as did – on the same estimate – his 1955-56 and 1956-57 back-to-back title-winning honours also in their original fitted cases.

One of the best auction performers against estimate was actually a runners-up honour, for the FA Cup in 1957. The gold medal, in original fitted case, realised £13,000 against an estimate of £3000-5000.

Berry had joined from Birmingham City in 1951. He played for United from 1951-58, completing 276 appearances and scoring 45 goals over the next seven years. He wore the number 7 shirt in every game but one, the September 1955 fixture against Everton, when he donned number 11.

Berry's Football League Representative Match medal from 1954 for a game against the Football League of Ireland sold for £3000 (estimate £800-1200), and a signed leatherbound book on the life of Eva Peron presented for his appearance in an England vs Argentina match in Buenos Aires in 1953 went within estimate at £460. Berry played for England four times between 1953-56.

His Man U contract from June 8, 1956, showing his wage of £12 per week, sold for a mid-estimate £1900. Berry's son Neil, whose book Johnny The Forgotten Babe, describing his father's years at United, was published in 2007, said: "He was a very modest man and was proud of his association with Manchester United, although he was underwhelmed by his pay and conditions. They used to play on Christmas Day and Boxing Day in those days. He had to borrow a neighbour's bike to cycle to Old Trafford to play."

The most Berry ever got at Man U was £20 a week (now about £670), but that was a fortune compared to his pay at Birmingham: £7 a week in the winter and £5 in the summer, when he had to supplement his wages by working as a barber.

All the Berry items – seven in total – were purchased by a buyer in the room, a UK collector.

Ewbank's sold the football collection and medals of former United captain Norman Whiteside in July 2020.

Great goalscorers

On March 7-8, the Graham Budd (24% buyer's premium) Sports Memorabilia auction in Wellingborough offered another winner's medal from the 1956-57 season. It was given to Berry's fellow Munich crash survivor whose name is more familiar to most football fans: Dennis Viollet.

A local lad, born in Fallowfield in 1933, he was a key member of the Busby Babes. Viollet scored 16 league goals in the 1956-57 campaign.

The inside forward is joint fifth (with George Best) on the United all-time top goal-scorers list with 179 – but from 293 appearances so he has the best goals per game ratio in the top 10 at 0.61 per game, fractionally more prolific than Denis Law in this respect.

Viollet played for United until 1962 and scored 32 league goals in the 1959-60 season.

The 9ct gold, 15gms medal had been sold in an auction of Football Memorabilia, including the Dennis Viollet Collection, at Christie's Scotland in October 1994.

At Budd's sale, consigned by a private collector with a trade card showing Viollet and a newspaper obituary, it doubled the top estimate to make £30,000 from a private buyer online.

A United No 10 shirt worn by another Munich disaster survivor, Sir Bobby Charlton, also took £30,000 (its high estimate).

The red short-sleeved Umbro jersey was worn in the friendly match against Real Madrid played on October 1, 1959 and gained by Ferenc Puskas as a swap after the match.

The clubs played five friendly matches from 1959-62 and were seen as vital parts of Matt Busby's rebuilding programme after Munich.

The jersey was consigned by Puskas' granddaughter.

Tom Derbyshire

'Possibly the oldest Football League shirt extant'

This jersey shown right dates from between 1886 and 1890 – making it not just the oldest Middlesbrough FC shirt but possibly the oldest Football League shirt extant.

Made like a Victorian dress shirt in a heavy, white wool flannelette with a blue and white polka dot cotton trim, it includes a label reading Manufactured by E Banks, shirt maker Middlesboro. The badge inscribed MFC Erimus is hand embroidered.

London sporting memorabilia specialist Graham Budd concluded the shirt, which had survived in remarkably good condition, had to date from before 1890 as that was the year the club (established in 1876) changed its colours, first to an all-blue shirt, then to all-white and finally to the red of today.

He said: "I find it fascinating that this actually bears a badge beautifully embroidered on the breast pocket with the MFC logo, so I would also imagine that the shirt could have held some special significance to either club or player."

Estimated at £15,000-20,000, it took £16,000 (plus 24% buyer's premium) on March 7. It was offered by a private collector and bought by a private online buyer.

Middlesbrough FC turned professional in 1889 for three years before reverting to amateur, then became permanently full time in 1899.

Roland Arkell

Gunners south of the river

With Arsenal still setting the pace at the top of the Premier League as we went to press, several lots offered at Graham Budd's (24% buyer's premium) sale on March 7-8 acted as a reminder of the club's formative days.

It has been suggested that the image was prior to the match against Stoke on April 29, 1893, which was the last game that the club played under the title Royal Arsenal (the name that had followed Dial Square FC, the title when the club was formed in 1886). Arsenal moved north of the river in 1913.

Sold in the Christie's Scotland Football Memorabilia auction in November 1996, at Budd's sale it went within estimate at £650.

A Woolwich Arsenal v Manchester United black and white postcard, portraying action from the match played at Plumstead on March 16, 1907, publisher unstated but probably Goldthorpe, Photo Chemist, Plumstead, also sold within estimate at £550.

Season ticket

Best performer, though, was a season ticket from 1893-94 (above right).

With green covers and gilt-tooled initials WAFC, the ticket in the name of Mrs C Tarrant was cut at four corners. It took £3200 (estimate £1500-2000).

Silver means first place

Gold has become the standard to aspire to at the Olympics but for the first version of the modern summer Games it was silver.

Winners' medals for the 1896 revived event held in Athens were not struck in gold. Second place medals were bronze and no third place awards given. Gold medals appeared for the 1904 St Louis Games.

Divine intervention

Designed by Jules Chaplain and minted in Paris, the signed 1896 medals on the obverse feature a portrait of Zeus with the globe in his right hand, on which stands the goddess of victory, Nike, holding an olive branch, and to the left in Greek the script reads Olympia.

The reverse depicts a representation of the Acropolis and Parthenon, the inscription translated from the Greek reading International Olympic Games, Athens, 1896.

Forty-three original silver medals were presented. The International Olympic Committee has now reclassified the 1896 medals to modern 'gold, silver, bronze' awards.

The original recipient of the example that came up at Graham Budd's auction on March 7-8 (above) is unknown. With a provenance to the property of a private collector, it sold at £36,000 (plus 24% buyer's premium) to a private buyer online against a guide of £30,000-50,000.

No Dickens but a cricket tour at least

"A very rare and early item of cricketing history" is how Knights Sporting Auctions (20% buyer's premium) describes the large silk handkerchief shown here.

Titled Eleven of England in Australia with Mr. Mallam, it dates to 1861-62 and commemorates England's first cricket tour to Australia.

The centre is printed in sepia with an image of the 11 members of the touring party, all named, standing with the tour manager, Mallam. Not depicted is the 12th member of the party, 'Tiny' Wells. Below the image can be seen the embroidered initials RS (Richard Sanderson of Swaley, Clitheroe, who played one first-class match, for Lancashire, in 1870).

Measuring 2ft 11in x 2ft 9in (89 x 84cm) in a modern frame, it previously sold at Christie's sale in October 1987. Apart from minor soiling, it was described by the Norwich auction house as otherwise in very good condition.

It sold for £2600 against an estimate of £800-1200 on March 18.

In 1861 the first All-England cricket team to tour Australia sailed on SS Great Britain from Liverpool. This was the first commercial sponsorship of cricket.

The idea for the tour came from the English proprietors of a Melbourne company called Spiers and Pond, which ran the Cafe de Paris in the city. Spiers was Felix William Spiers and Pond was Christopher Pond.

Their representative in England, a Mr Mallam, had tried to interest Charles Dickens in a lecture tour of Australia and New Zealand, offering him £7000, later increased to £10,000, to travel to Australia, but Dickens turned the offer down.

Growing popularity

Instead, having noted the success of the first England overseas cricket tour of 1859 to North America and the growing popularity of cricket in Australia, Spiers and Pond decided to attract a team of leading English cricketers.

Mallam therefore journeyed to Birmingham in September 1861 to watch the North v South game at Aston Park. During the game, Mallam met the cricketers at the nearby Hen and Chicken Hotel to make a business proposal.

As a result, 12 players agreed to tour Australia the following winter on terms of £150 per man plus expenses.

Geoffrey Munn, historian, writer, specialist on BBC's Antiques Roadshow and former managing director of London jewellers Wartski.

I am simply riveted by the ATG and count the days before the next edition. After a lifetime dealing in Fabergé and antique jewellery, I may appear rather type cast. However my interests include every aspect of art. Reading the ATG is like having a birthday every week with tempting presents from the four corners of the world unwrapped before my very eyes... When is the next one due?

Serhat Ahmet, dealer in fine European porcelain in Covent Garden, specialist on BBC's Antiques Roadshow and Antiques Road Trip.

The ATG has been a weekly go-to for me for over thirty years. What I love about it is that it has managed to stay relevant throughout those decades and has therefore remained the one subscription I could not be without. As well as the most important read for the trade, many of my clients also subscribe to the ATG for a wide-ranging and interesting read.

Trade greets Wodehouse wonders

Middle market Old Masters, longstanding family ownership, market freshness... what's not to like?

by Gabriel Berner

The Wodehouse Collection, offered as part of Dreweatts' (26/25% buyer's premium) Old Master, British and European Art auction, was the kind of assemblage the picture trade loves.

Comprising around two dozen Old Masters pitched at the middle market, the group boasted a longstanding ancestral provenance and had not appeared at auction before.

It included pictures also in need of a little TLC with several works meriting further specialist research.

Staffs mansion

The collection – a combination of 25 loosely attributed British and continental still lifes, portraits and religious works offered on March 2 in Donnington Priory – came from the Grade II*-listed country mansion known as The Wodehouse, situated near Wombourne in Staffordshire where they were surplus to requirements.

Remarkably, the house has never been sold in its 900-year history, with the current owners inheriting the property by marriage.

It is most notable as the family seat of the Georgian landscape designer and musicologist Sir Samuel Hellier (1672-1727) who created the core of an important collection of musical instruments and literature.

The pictures at Dreweatts had been in the Hellier family for generations and all had a fair amount of grime and dirt to show for it.

On the day, all but six lots sold to total just under £125,000, well above pre-sale predictions with the trade particularly active.

Dreweatts picture specialist Anne Gerritsen said quality, provenance and conservative estimates all played a role in the strong market response to the group, adding: "An ancestral collection fresh to the market always has a lot of appeal for buyers."

Still-life activity

Several still-lives stood out. A 23in x 2ft 4in (59 x 72cm) oil on canvas of a violin, teapot and clock by a follower of Dutch painter Pieter Gerritsz van Roestraten (1630-1700) was knocked down to the UK trade at £10,000, more than three times its estimate.

An ancestral collection fresh to the market always has a lot of appeal for buyers

According to the family, it depicted the famous 'Hellier Stradivarius', one of the best-preserved violins made by Antonio Stradivari in c. 1679 and now in the Stradivari Foundation in Cremona. (Interestingly, the violin is noted for its inlaid decoration on the ribs which is thought to be the work of Stradivari's own hand yet is not visible in the painting.)

A note to the verso of the picture stated it had also been exhibited at the County Museum in Warwick in 1968, possibly with the real violin.

Eagerly contested by the UK trade to £26,000 was an attractive 19in x 2ft 7in (48 x 79cm) oil on panel Still Life with a Roemer, Oysters and Bread and Butter on a table.

It was catalogued as by a follower of Willem Claesz Heda (1594-1680), one of the principal Dutch Baroque still-life painters best known for his restrained compositions of glass and metal vessels arranged with oysters and half-peeled lemons among other motifs.

The last of the still-life highlights to hit the auction block was a highly decorative 15 x 19in (40 x 50cm) oil on canvas showing a cooked lobster and shrimp on a ledge, catalogued as 'circle of' the Irish animal painter Charles Collins (1680-1744).

It sold to the UK trade at £14,000, nearly five times its top estimate.

A similar work by Collins, Lobster on a Delft Dish (1738), is in the Tate and noted for its simple and striking composition compared with the sumptuous displays of food and wine favoured by contemporary Netherlandish painters.

2. Portrait of a lady by Tilly Kettle, £11,000.

3. Bearing the Dead Body of Patroclus to the Camp by Thomas Douglas Guest, £20,000.

4. Still-life showing a lobster, 'circle of' the Irish animal painter Charles Collins, £14,000.

auction, according to artprice.com.

Bids also emerged for a large collection of hitherto unseen works by Herbert Olivier (1861-1952), a Royal Academy-trained portrait and landscape painter who was also the uncle of Laurence Olivier.

The 39 lots, which had hung for over 100 years at the artist's London home in Holland Park, largely got away within or slightly below pre-sale expectations although a few of the more expensive works failed to find buyers.

The group included a large 2ft 11in x 3ft 9in (89cm x 1.16m) oil on canvas depicting the Italian garden of the artist's close friend, expat explorer and writer Freya Stark (1893-1993).

The summery scene, dated 1889 and showing a classical sculpture in the shade of trees and surrounded by purple irises, made the joint highest price of the group when it was knocked down within estimate for £9000 to a UK private buyer. ■

Portraits on offer

Pick of the portraits was a lady in Ottoman dress catalogued as 'circle of' Jean-Baptiste Vanmour (1671-1737), the Flemish-French painter remembered for his detailed portrayal of life in the Ottoman Empire during the prosperous Tulip Era between 1718-30.

The 3ft 5in x 2ft 9in (1.04m x 85cm) oil on canvas was knocked down at £21,500 to a private European buyer against a £4000-6000 estimate.

Among only a handful of firm attributions was an 18th century portrait of an unidentified lady by London-born painter Tilly Kettle (1735-86). One of several works from the Wolverhampton Art and Industrial Exhibition of 1902, it nearly doubled hopes to sell for £11,000 to a private buyer based in the UK against a £4000-6000 estimate.

Kettle has the distinction of being one of the first prominent English artists to work in India, where he enjoyed considerable success painting portraits of British and Indian dignitaries and scenes of local life.

Some of the best examples from his period in India have sold for six figures at auction.

Be my Guest

Elsewhere in the Dreweatts sale a large history painting by Thomas Douglas Guest (1781-1845) depicting a scene from the death of Patroclus in Homer's Iliad was knocked down to a private buyer in Europe for £20,000, nearly three times its top guide.

The 3ft 3in x 4ft 1in (1m x 1.25m) oil on canvas is one of Guest's more important works, having been awarded the Gold Medal for it in the Royal Academy Schools in 1805. It had previously sold at Sotheby's in November 1994 for £7200.

Forming part of a large consignment of traditional pictures owned by Northamptonshire dealer Windsor House Antiques was a rare oil attributed to Edward Angelo Goodall (1819-1908), who is better known for his Orientalist watercolours.

The 2ft 7in x 3ft 9in (78cm x 1.15m) oil on canvas, depicting the mosque of Sultan Hassan in Cairo, was knocked down to a European private buyer for £16,000 against its £2000-3000 estimate.

Goodall may have painted the work in c.1880 when he produced an identical watercolour of the mosque's open courtyard, now in the collections at the Art Gallery of New South Wales in Sydney, Australia.

Goodall's depiction of the building, which by the 19th century had fallen into semi-decay, was described in The Art Journal in 1880 as "an immense interior peopled with worshippers, full of dust and heat, with sun rays striking through the lofty openings in the walls".

Only two other pictures, both oils, by Goodall have made more at

Festival of Antiques & Vintage

Elegant sitter 'from the Fairfaxes' catches the attention

A flurry of bids emerged at Mallams (25% buyer's premium) in Oxford for a particularly fine 17th century portrait of a young woman.

Catalogued as 'circle of Mary Beale (1632-1697-99)', the 4ft 2in x 3ft 5in (1.27 x 1.04m) oil on canvas was taken to £31,000, over 10 times its top estimate, in the March 8 Art & Music auction. It was lined, cleaned and restored and came from an estate in the Cotswolds.

Much of its appeal centred on the elegant sitter, shown wearing a brown dress and blue cape with a landscape behind. The auction house suggested she may have been a lady from the Fairfax family. The Fairfaxes were a long-established Yorkshire Catholic family who owned extensive land and property in the county, including their principal residence Gilling Castle, 20 miles north of York.

Mallams' picture specialist Rupert Fogden described the portrait as "very decorative and appealing" and "in very good condition, finely painted and with a real sense of presence". It was knocked down to a trade buyer via the phone against competition from the internet and another phone bidder.

Also from the same estate was a 2ft 10in x 2ft 3in (87 x 70cm) oil on canvas of a Spanish grandee wearing a white ruff and Milanese armour, catalogued as by a follower of the Dutch court painter Michiel Jansz van Mierevelt (1567-1641). It too had been lined, cleaned and restored and contained a bird symbol on the sitter's left arm – a possible clue as to his heritage. It sold on top estimate for £6000 to an online bidder.

Elsewhere, a typical Scottish loch scene by Victorian artist Alfred de Breanski (1852-1928) was secured by a member of the trade for £10,000, twice its mid estimate.

The Head of Loch Lubnaig, a 23in x 2ft 11in (59 x 90cm) oil on canvas of a small freshwater loch in the Highlands with cattle bathing in the water, was sold with both its original and a later replacement frame.

Though demand has declined for Breanski's idyllic depictions of rural Scotland and Wales over the last few decades, this example was towards the upper end of prices at auction in recent years.

Multiple bids also emerged for a series of accomplished 19th century watercolours, catalogued as English School. The eight works had been taken from a portfolio of watercolours and included a 10½ x 15in (28 x 38cm) depiction of Ugbrooke Park in Devon. With a modest estimate of £100-200, it was taken to £2800, selling to the trade.

Middle-Earth history works edited by Christopher and two copies of The Hobbit with interesting links

by Ian McKay & Tom Derbyshire

A 12 volume set of 'The History of Middle-Earth' books edited by their creator's son, Christopher Tolkien, sold for £2400 in the Norfolk saleroom of TW Gaze (18% buyer's premium) on February 28.

Published in 1983-96, they are works in which tales, songs, poems, maps, illustrations, genealogical tables and even primers for the languages devised by his philologist father, John Ronald Ruel Tolkien, are provided.

Individual titles include The Shaping of Middle-Earth, The Treason of Isengard, The War of the Ring and Sauron Defeated.

JRR Tolkien (1892-1973) once referred to his youngest son as his "chief critic and collaborator" and named him his literary executor in his will. As well as organising his father's unpublished writings, some of them written on odd scraps of paper half a century earlier, Christopher (1924-2020) also drew the original maps for The Lord of the Rings, as well as producing an edition of The Silmarillion for publication in 1977.

Holy order

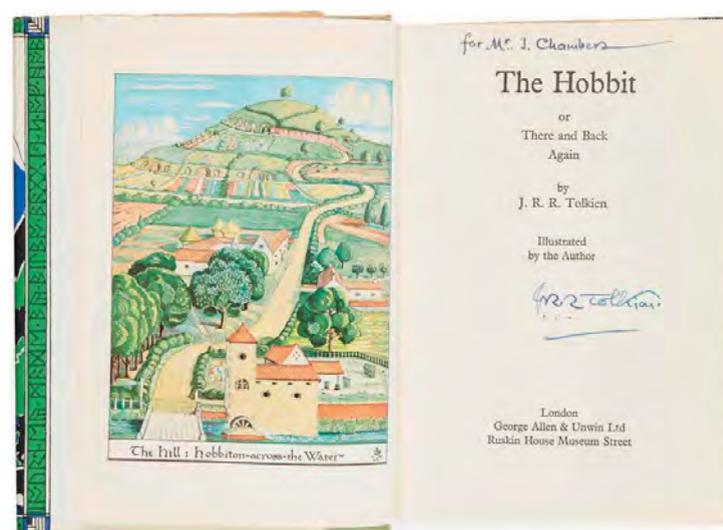

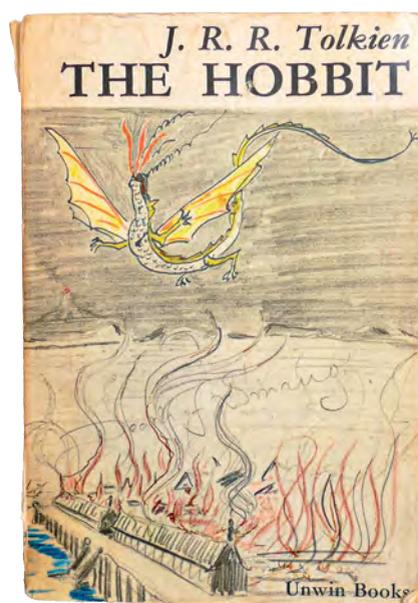

Another of JRR's three sons (he also had a daughter), John, featured when a signed copy of The Hobbit was sold at Potteries Auctions (20% buyer's premium) on March 11.

Offered in Stoke-on-Trent with an estimate of £250-500 was a copy of the The Hobbit, Unwin Books, 14th impression, 1972.

The vendor stated: "My mother – Kath Taylor – came by the book and autograph during her employment as housekeeper to the Rev John Tolkien who was parish priest at Our Lady of Angels and St Peter in Chains RC Church in Hartshill, Stoke-on-Trent, who resided at Northcote House, Hartshill Road."

John (1917-2003) was parish priest from 1966-87 and his father JRR visited him on many occasions, staying at Northcote House, which at the time was the Presbytery to the church. The vendor added: "When he came to Our Lady's his live-in housekeeper was Miss K Restall, whose name can be seen at the top of the page.

"My mother came to work at the presbytery at first to assist Miss Restall but later took on the role of housekeeper when she retired. The book was given to my mother and signed by the author on one of his visits. The book was later given to me by my mother."

Described as in used condition with splitting to spine and some loose pages, the book sold at £2900.

Noted bookseller

A different, non-family connection helped another copy of The Hobbit to go well beyond an estimate of £3000-5000 to sell at £14,000.

Offered at Lyon & Turnbull (26/25/20% buyer's premium) in Edinburgh on February 8 was a copy of a George Allen & Unwin, 1966, third edition, second impression (16th impression overall) illustrated by the author.

It is inscribed 'for Mr I Chambers, JRR Tolkien' on the title-page, and bears the bookplate of the recipient, Ivan Chambers OBE (1902-98), on the front free endpaper.

Chambers was a noted bookseller who worked for the dealership WJ Bryce, which operated from premises on London's Museum Street in a building owned by Stanley Unwin, Tolkien's publisher.

According to the Oxford Dictionary of National Biography: "The success of Tolkien's writing, as well as his subsequent fanatical worldwide readership, was due in no small part to the author-publisher relationship that existed between Tolkien, Stanley Unwin, and later [Stanley's son] Rayner Unwin."

The book was consigned by descent from Ivan Chambers. ■

Left: bid to £800 in the TW Gaze auction was a first impression copy of Hilary Mantel's Wolf Hall of 2009 – the first book in the writer's trilogy of novels focused on the life of Thomas Cromwell. With its pictorial dust jacket, designed by Andy Bridge, unclipped and revealing its original price tag of £18.99, this copy was signed by the author to the title page.

'I thought you were dead'

A handful of lots featuring communications between an actress, Miss Alice Bowes (1889-1969), and George Bernard Shaw featured in a February 23 sale held by Mullock's (20% buyer's premium).

Signed GBS and dated April 1927 by Shaw, the message on the back of the photocard reproduced here, which sold at £650 to an online bidder in Church Stretton, Shropshire, would appear to hint at a rather wicked sense of humour.

Shaw writes: "I did not know that Gurney [the actor, Edmund Gurney] was dead but I thought you were, it has been so long since you reminded me of your existence.

"I seem to be surviving everybody but how can I help it unless I commit suicide. It is none the less bad manners. I apologise I am delighted to learn that you are still in the living".

Your own Lindisfarne Gospels

Sold at the high-estimate sum of £3500 at Canterbury Auction Galleries (22.5% buyer's premium) on February 4 was a German facsimile edition of the Lindisfarne Gospels.

One of 290 copies produced in 2002 by Facsimile Verlag Luzern, it boasts a binding which replicates that found on a Victorian printed edition of 1852.

The velvet and white metal covered boards are adorned with 37 precious and semi-precious stones: four small rubies, four amethysts, four pieces of turquoise, an emerald, four pieces of citrine, 16 garnets and four pieces of chrysoptase, a variety of chalcedony.

Also boasting silver thread embroidery to the spine, this recent facsimile edition was boxed with two volumes of commentary on the text.

The original Lindisfarne Gospels is a famous and very early manuscript recounting the life and teachings of Jesus Christ which runs to over 500 vellum pages – for which around 150 calf skins were needed, it has been suggested. It takes its name from the belief that it was written and illuminated in the early 8th century by Eadfrith, a monk (later a Bishop) at the Benedictine monastery of Lindisfarne, a tidal island just off the Northumberland coast.

That monastery was attacked and looted by Vikings in 793, but though the original binding was lost, the manuscript itself escaped destruction and by the 12th century was located at Durham Cathedral.

In later times it found its way into the hands of at least three other English collectors before being acquired by the antiquary Robert Cotton, whose grandson, John Cotton (1621-1702), later bequeathed the family's exceptional library to the British Museum.

There it has long been cherished as the most spectacular manuscript to survive from Anglo-Saxon England.

Rogers Jones' Welsh Sale on April 1 includes this Swansea porcelain dessert plate painted by Thomas Baxter, c.1816-19, of duck-egg body, circular, non-moulded form, solid gilt rim and inner rim and gilt scrolling foliate border.

It bears an original inscription to the basebase OLD FORT GAUT, CALCUTTA Within the walls of this fort is the black hole, whose name is eternized by the sufferings of Mr Holwell and his ill fated companions in 1756.

The 8½in (21cm) diameter plate is estimated at £4000-6000.

Sworders' sale of Old Masters, British and European Art on April 4 features some very fine English watercolours from an English private collection.

They include a painting from David Roberts' famous Holy Land series that is guided at £20,000-30,000.

Roberts' watercolour of Jaffa is dated March 26, 1839, and was probably painted on the spot. Depicting the ancient city port of Judea – where Noah is said to have built the ark – it features the colourful costumes, the exotic animals and the impressive architecture and ancient monuments that made the region so appealing to Western eyes.

Roberts made several views of Jaffa, two of which were converted into lithographs for his monumental three-volume publishing project The Holy Land.

Tennants' Toys, Models, Collectables and Sporting Sale on April 5 is led by a Hornby O Gauge 4-6-2

Princess Elizabeth

LMS 6201 estimated at £1200-1800. The locomotive was a special model issued in 1939 just before the war, and was the only Hornby locomotive to be a faithful replica of the real train, down to the smallest details.

The full-sized Princess Elizabeth was the most famous of the London Midland and Scottish railway's giant locomotives. It made history in 1936 for setting a world record for a long distance non-stop steam journey, from Glasgow to London, travelling at an average speed of 70mph.

Unfortunately, the close modelling on the original train had a drawback. The distinctive three-couple wheel design meant that it could not get round the corners on an ordinary curved Hornby track. Many of the extant examples of the model, such as the present lot, are to be found in good condition in their original display boxes, as they were not able to be used on the majority of home model railways.

Early Star Wars figures are going under the hammer at Richard Winterton in Tamworth on March 29.

The collection includes around 50 original figures in sealed blister packs, 28 of which are catalogued as single lots including Luke Skywalker, Princess Leia, Boba Fett and Yoda.

There are also three 'Mail-away' Boba Fett figures, which would arrive in plain packaging having been ordered through the post via a special offer. Boxed Star Wars toys include a 12in tall Boba Fett, radio-controlled R2-D2, an Imperial Troop Transporter and an Electronic Battle Command Game.

The collection was compiled by a toy salesman who went on to open his own shop. He owned them for 40 years and died in 2022.

Oundle chapel was consecrated in 1923 as a memorial to Oundle school old boys who had died in the First World War. To celebrate the Northamptonshire school's quarter centenary in 1956, John Piper (1903-92) was commissioned to design a series of stained glass windows for the apse.

These windows are famous for being the first collaboration between the artists John Piper and Patrick Reyntiens – the man who 'translated' Piper's designs to the medium of stained glass. Their partnership of 30 years produced some of the most important and influential stained glass in this country.

Piper designed over 60 stained glass windows.

The Oundle windows portray Christ in nine forms. The central figure of each one is a green man, influenced by Picasso's paintings and French medieval stained glass and sculptures.

It took three years to make the windows and they were dedicated by Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother in 1956.

Soon afterwards, the architect Basil Spence went to see them and decided to commission Piper and Reyntiens to produce a huge baptistry window for his cathedral in Coventry.

On April 6 Parker Fine Art Auctions in Farnham, Surrey, is offering a watercolour and gouache triptych design by Piper for the Oundle windows, measuring overall 17 x 13.5in (43 x 34.5cm). Estimate £8000-12,000.

Specialist print fair has constantly evolved but remains at heart a celebration of these works on paper

by Frances Allitt

Camden Town's Hidden Gallery brings a range of Modern and Contemporary artists to the London Original Print Fair (LOPF).

During the event, which runs from March 30-April 2 at Somerset House, the gallery showcases a range of works by highly familiar hands, such as Henry Moore, David Shrigley and Roy Lichtenstein, such as his Modern Head #1, pictured here.

It also brings a Marilyn Monroe head offset lithograph in colours, Marilyn Invitation (Castelli Graphics), which was printed in 1981, just four years before the fair launched.

Back then, the fair was a slightly different event comprising a clutch of fewer than 20 dealers all specialising in Old Master and historic prints. Today it hosts more than 40 exhibitors, most of whom come armed with recent pieces. At this staging new work is set to be launched by Harland Miller, Gavin Turk, Grayson Perry, Tracey Emin and other major current names.

But at its heart it remains the same as it always was: a celebration of original works on paper attractive on their own merits and appealing for relatively affordability.

With 38 stagings to its name, the LOPF is now the longest-running specialist art fair in London (British Art Fair launched in 1988 and the London Art Fair in 1989).

Director Helen Rosslyn is determined that, despite the challenges familiar to all fair 10 international dealers who stood before Brexit. For them, VAT and escalating shipping costs pose a challenge on top of regulatory red tape.

Rosslyn is keen to tempt more back, but welcomes some overseas presence, with Kunstverket of Oslo standing.

Meanwhile, several newcomers to this edition include Muban Educational Trust specialising in Contemporary Chinese woodblock printmaking, and fellow Contemporary specialist Counter Editions from Margate. Also joining is a new venture, Vistavaka Fine Art, mounting an exhibition dedicated to 18th century French prints.

Other exhibitors include Emanuel von Baeyer, Gwen Hughes Fine Art, Elizabeth Harvey-Lee, Hanga Ten and Sims Reed Gallery.

Among the significant losses this year is founding member Andrew Edmunds who died last year and will be remembered in a special display (see below left).

For many years the event was held at the Royal Academy. Following lockdown, scheduling at the institution meant that LOPF moved to Somerset House, but Rosslyn says they "couldn't rule out" going back to Piccadilly. In the meantime, the fair is fostering its relationship with the Academicians thanks to an exhibition of prints by members curated by artist Stephen Chambers.

Also on offer is an extensive talks programme with artists such as Anita Klein and Tom Hammick as well as dealers and scholars.

Rosslyn adds: "We've been taking the long view when it comes to running the fair. That's why we've kept going. We don't want to fold. We want to bring a voice to prints." ■ organisers these days, LOPF has many years ahead.

Prices to stage events are rising, and Rosslyn tells ATG it has been a tricky year – or three – for dealers.

"We have slightly fewer exhibitors this year because lots of people have been finding it difficult," she says. "We have definitely taken that into consideration and we have to be forward looking when it comes to the fair."

Some of those who have not returned are the clutch of more than

A special tribute exhibition celebrating the life of the late Andrew Edmunds is part of this year's London Original Print Fair. Curated by his son Milo Edmunds and art historian Tim Clayton, it will feature the dealer and restaurateur's collection of James Gillray prints, including works never before exhibited and rare impressions. It is hoped that the collection will find a single buyer.

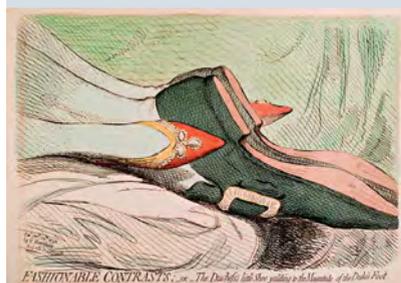

Edmunds was a founding member of the event and exhibited there for more than 30 years. Fair director Helen Rosslyn said: "He epitomises a real print collector.

Every time he bought a new, better edition of a print he would sell the less good one. We are looking to pay tribute to one of our founding dealers."

Above and right: two views of the single Italian gem from the Marlborough Collection on display at Les Enluminures, priced $85,000.

Gem is the mane attraction

Les Enluminures' next New York exhibition comprises a single Italian gem from the Marlborough Collection.

The show, from March 30 to May 9, pitches the gem at $85,000. The combined weight of the price tag and a whole exhibition might be a lot to pin on the small stone – but the gallery argues that there is plenty of strength in this little work.

Part of the interest is intrinsic. Carved into cymophane (also known as tiger's eye or cat's eye), it depicts the head of a lion with a flowing mane.

It was carved c.1600 in Italy, probably in Milan, and is offered on a modern gold mount.

Small pupils and teeth are worked into the stone, which has a semi-transparent quality providing shifting palette from pale green to yellow to brown.

Extensive provenance

Then there is its extensive and well-documented early provenance.

Its first known owner was Baron

Philipp von Stosch (1691-1757), a Prussian antiquarian with a collection of more than 3500 gems.

He hired draughtsmen to record key pieces, and one surviving image by Pier Leone Ghezzi with Hieronymus Odam depicts the gem in question. It then passed to gem-engraver and medalist Johann Lorenz Natter (1705-63), who illustrated it in his album Museum Britannicum.

Eventually it made its way into the collection of George Spencer, 4th Duke of Marlborough (1739-1817), who had the largest and most important assemblage of engraved gems in the 18th century.

The whole collection was sold in 1875 and dispersed in 1899. The lion is not one of the elusive 'lost' gems from the collection and has appeared on the open market several times since.

Such pieces often hold museum interest, but also draw private collectors at the top end of the market.

Thousands of items are available to buy from dealers online. Here we pick out one that caught our eye this week.

Antiques rugs and carpets dealer James Cohen offers this Lakai Nim Suzani for £9600.

The dowry embroidery, 3ft 5in x 4ft 10in (98cm x 1.46m), was made c.1850 by an Uzbek girl to demonstrate her skill and value before marriage.

The central panel has a tree of life design with multi-coloured blossoms.

According to the dealer: "Really good ones have a naive charm, are full of motion and fine embroidery, and packed with charming colour. This one ticks all the boxes."

It is offered in original condition, the colours still vivid despite some natural aging.

Dealers' Diary

News in brief

Martin Tinney (right), the Welsh art dealer, is retiring after more than 30 years in the business.

His Cardiff firm, Martin Tinney Gallery, which has run for 31 years, is closing at the end of the month.

Until then there is an exhibition of works by major names in 20th century Welsh art, plus some of the gallery's Contemporary artists.

Tinney says: "Over the passing years it has been gratifying to witness the development of the Welsh art market to the much broader, more vibrant scene of today."

To mark three decades of the gallery last year, he staged well-received solo exhibitions on Gwen John and her brother Augustus John.

Tinney, who has been in the business for a total of 33 years, recalls opening the premises "in a blaze – well, flicker really – of youthful optimism and not a little naivety".

Although it is commonly accepted that dealers never really retire, Tinney insists that he is making a clean break – at least for now. There are no plans for any remaining stock after the gallery shuts its doors on March 31. He adds: "In the nature of these things, it has been a great deal of hard work and a lot of fun."

Early highlights have been announced for London Art Week (LAW), which takes place from June 30-July 7. Selling exhibitions are planned across St James's, Mayfair, Pimlico, Kensington and Chelsea, and include works by Winifred Nicholson, Sarah Stone, Frans Pourbus the Younger and Stephen Tomlin. Its promotional map, designed by illustrator Adam Dant, will also return.

An auction of works from the collection of London dealer Michael Goedhuis dubbed the Brush and Bronze sale will take place at Bonhams New Bond Street on May 18.

It offers a selection of Chinese ink paintings by more than 20 key artists of the last four decades and bronze sculptures and vessels produced from the Song dynasty (960-1279) to the Qing (1644-1911).

Goedhuis left investment banking in 1975 to pursue an interest in Asian art.

London Gallery Weekend returns this summer from June 2-4. Launched in 2021, it now boasts more than 120 galleries including Bowman Sculpture, The Gallery of Everything, Piano Nobile Gallery and Pace Gallery. The majority of the programming focuses on Contemporary artists, with an enhanced schedule of performance art planned for this year.

Also new for this year is the expansion of its travel bursary project. Developed out of a partnership with Art Fund last year, the travel grants supported costs for UK region curators to attend the programme. This year, a new bursary programme has been launched for curators from across the EU. In total five UK and five EU attendees will receive funding.

Right: pair of mid-19th century Chippendale style mahogany ribband back armchairs offered by LVS Decorative Arts shown in conjunction with The Gentleman and Cabinet-Maker's Director illustrations.

LVS Decorative Arts has on offer a set of 14 Chippendale revival chairs: 12 c.1860 mahogany 'ribband' back chairs plus a similar pair of armchairs.

Both are designed exactly from illustrations in The Gentleman and Cabinet-Maker's Director first edition of 1754. LVS produced special images to help illustrate the influence.

The firm's Liza Scolding said: "As dealers we're always on the look-out for fine quality examples and these chairs certainly tick that box. Chippendale claimed himself that this design of chair were 'the best I have ever seen (or perhaps have ever been made)'."

Research undertaken by the dealership suggests that no other examples of this exact model of chair exist on the open market. They are offered for £80,000.

Friends and art reunited: pairs of objects brought together at TEFAF

by Frances Allitt

At this year's TEFAF Maastricht it was not just members of the art market that were reunited but the objects themselves.

Two pairs with significant links were found during the event held from March 11-19.

The first was a still-life painting by Willem Claesz Heda (c.1596-1680) and the silver drinking dish it depicts.

Heda's A vanitas still-life with a broken roamer, an upturned tazza and a peeled lemon on a ledge (1646) was offered by Dickinson of London.

The tazza in question appeared on the stand of Dutch firm Endlich Antiquairs.

Known as the Heda Tazza, the dish is familiar from other pictures by the Dutch artist now in major collections such as the Rijksmuseum and the National Gallery of Art in Washington DC.

It was made in Amsterdam in 1618 and bears an unidentified clover maker's mark. During the fair it sold to a US public collection.

The dealers' stands were on nearly opposite ends of the fair, and it is often difficult for traders to stroll the length of the event, particularly in the early days.

Far left: Willem Claesz Heda's A vanitas still life with a broken roamer, an upturned tazza and a peeled lemon, on a ledge (1646) was offered by Dickinson.

However, Paul van den Biesen, head of collecting, collectors and museums at TEFAF, made the connection after noticing first the picture at Dickinson and then the tazza itself.

Panini pair

Also reunited at the fair were a 1754 oil on canvas by Giovanni Paolo Panini (1691-1765), The Consecration of Giovanni Carlo Molinari, and the preparatory study for the work.

Brun Fine Art brought the finished work, which depicts the appointment of Molinari as titular archbishop of Damascus by Pope Benedict XIV.

The picture is thought to have been in a single collection at the Casa Molinari on Lake Como, until it emerged at a Christie's auction in 2008.

Dealer Marco Brun quickly made the link when he saw the study on the stand of Galerie Eric Coatalem of Paris. Brun told ATG that he noticed the other picture when he went around the fair on the first day, and that the pairing offered an opportunity for a museum or collector.

He added: "I didn't know before that there was a boceto [sketch] of this work. It is very interesting for the history of Panini."

The Italian artist and architect is remembered particularly for his views of Rome and picture gallery paintings, and he was represented by other stands at the fair including Robilant + Voena.

Wise to be an early bird at Bath

Trade day at the decorative fair is particularly welcomed by dealers when times are more challenging

by Rachel Fellman

Dealer Spencer Swaffer was excited to be ready to go at the Bath Decorative Fair, occupying his traditional first place in the queue on the event's famous trade day.

The fair ran from March 9-11 at the Pavilion in Bath with stands fully booked.

Swaffer has never exhibited at Bath himself but says he will never miss the fair as a buyer: "It's more real stock and less fiddled about with, more antique and less contrived."

By the end of the preview, he had found numerous treasures for his shop in Arundel, including two from Acanthus Antiques: a West Country painted dresser base and a folk art painted rocking horse which fit the aesthetic of his shop perfectly.

The connection to trade buyers was key to the latest edition of the event where some reported overall sales to be slow.

Acanthus Antiques was among those selling out their stands on trade day. So too did Simon Wharton, who dubbed it the best trade day he'd ever had at the fair.

He said: "When times are tough, it's the trade that keeps you going."

Stalwart exhibitor Mary Hossack agreed.

"The best thing about this fair is it's different every time but you can always rely on the trade day," she said.

Her sales included a pair of 1980s 'Hollywood Regency' side tables for £600.

Anthony Hepworth, meanwhile, sold one of his offerings on opening day to a visiting dealer for £20,000. After this promising start he added to his sales sheet a kneeling sculpture in carved alabaster from the studio of Dora Gordine (1895-1991).

It was snapped up by a private client for £1200 on the Friday.

Mix of old and new

Fair manager Gail McLeod and the team secured a mix of new and returning exhibitors, and reported that ticket enquiries were up 25% on last year.

One of the newcomers she brought on board was Andy Walker of Desired Effect. New to this calibre of fair, he saw it as a good networking opportunity for industry contacts and private clients.

He was pleased to sell an 18th century elm reclining armchair to a local art gallery as a prop for £800 on the final day.

Like many exhibitors ATG spoke to, he found the fair marked by slow sales but good community spirit.

New dealers, husband-and-wife team Mat Smith and Rachel Moon of Smith & Moon, found "a great atmosphere among the dealers, cementing just what a great community there is in this industry."

They sold a pair of 1920s bespoke European oak and marble side tables to a trade buyer for £900.

Smith & Moon was a late entry to the fair. With only two and a half weeks to prepare, the couple were pleased with what they achieved and they reported making some great connections.

Fellow newcomers included Luke Fitzpatrick of The Thrifty Gent and his brother Johnny Fitzpatrick of Lucifer Fitzwardo. They shared business across two stands, much as they do in their split Birmingham shop. For them the fair brought new buyers – including one who never set foot in the venue. After seeing a promotional Instagram video, the buyer loved the brothers' aesthetic, got in touch, and expects a delivery from their next week.

Elsewhere at the fair William Morris Antiques & Fine Art offered a set of four Japanese lacquer panels, which sold to local interior designer Rebecca Morgans. She picked up the panels for a client at £700, planning to hinge and concertina them as a TV cover.

Returning dealer Henry Vaughan from Antique Gent also made a few good sales including a beaded deer head that Vaughan gets supplied to him direct from the Masai Tribe in Swaziland for £350, with a similar lion head being snapped up the previous day straight after the fair opened.

He also sold an elm bench for antiquetrade gazette.com

Important date

The Bath Decorative Fair remains an important date in the calendar for dealers and buyers alike and will be back in March 2024, although there is no set date yet. Maybe next year a few more signs in Bath town centre would make it easier to find, but with numbers up by over 20% and exciting new dealers in attendance, it's one to remember. ■

On a mission to make porcelain

Items sold at auction show how Jesuit expertise helped China to gain technological skill for enamelling

by Roland Arkell

From the 16th to the 18th centuries Christian missionaries played a significant role in the transmission of knowledge, science, and culture between China and the West.

Famously it was Jesuits that introduced the Qing court to the technology necessary for enamelling on porcelain.

One of the consequences of this was the range of porcelain known as Jesuit ware.

Predominantly made in the reign of Qianlong (1736-96) for export via Portuguese traders, it is typically decorated en grisaille and gilt with subject matter taken from European engravings.

A rarer series of wares from the 1720s are those with blue and white decoration.

These include a group of large 18in (45cm) bowls painted to the centre with a scene of the baptism of Christ.

He is shown as a young man standing with John the Baptist at the water's edge with the Holy Ghost represented as an ascending angel.

The border of fruit and cherubs includes the inscription Mat 3.16 – a reference to the relevant passage in the New Testament. A dish from the Mottahedeh collection, dated to c.1725, is pictured in David Howard and John Ayers' China for the West, where it is noted that "it is possible that this ware was made for use in China and Japan and was only incidentally exported to Europe as a curiosity or as evidence of the missionary work being done".

Auction examples

A similar example sold for £26,000 at Woolley & Wallis in Salisbury back in 2013 and another appeared at DVC Auctions (26% buyer's premium) in Ghent, Belgium, on March 4.

It was estimated at just €500-1500 but sold at €18,000 (£16,000).

In the same auction a fine example of Qianlong period Jesuit porcelain sold at €16,000 (£14,000) against similar expectations.

This large welled dish measuring 17in (42cm) across is decorated with a multi-figure allegorical scene of a marriage set in a baroque chapel.

A similar dish is in the collection of the National Museum of Decorative Arts in Buenos Aires. ■

Royal Worcester purchases in the running

Kenneth Ely (b.1926) had a first career as a jockey, apprenticed at the age of 15, writes Anne Crane.

Then after a fall from a horse ended his racing he went on to enjoy a second, rising to head of Dimplex Australia.

One of his collecting passions was Royal Worcester porcelain, which he started buying in the 1980s. A decade later Ken and his wife Gloria turned their attention to French art glass, particularly pâte de verre by Argy Rousseau and Almeric Walter.

Plaques focus

On February 27-28 Gibson's (22% buyer's premium) in Victoria, Australia, held a two-day auction of the couple's collection with the bulk of day one given over to their Royal Worcester wares.

Royal Worcester finely painted plaques were a particular focus for the Elys.

Their collection featured a sizeable number and it was one of these, a finely painted framed example from 1912 by William Hawkins signed lower left and measuring 11 x 6½in (28 x 17cm), not including its frame, that topped the bill.

The subject was not a Scottish misty landscape, a still-life of fruit or the highland cattle and sheep that make up so much of the decorative vocabulary for Royal Worcester artists, but a French painting.

It was a copy of the 19th century French artist Jean Louis Ernest Meissonier's The Print Collector, now in the Wallace Collection in London, which shows two men examining a print from a portfolio in an interior hung with paintings.

Estimated at Aus$4000-6000, it ending up selling for Aus$20,000 (£11,235).

The collection was plentifully supplied with works by the Stinton family of painters and Harry Davis, and it was a piece by the latter that provided the highest price for a vase in the sale.

A 17in (43cm) high example from 1910 with fine detailing and gilding to the handles was painted with sheep in a highland setting, signed lower right and realised Aus$16,000 (£8990).

Clocks collection

For three decades, from the 1950s-80s, a Bavarian connoisseur amassed a collection of clocks, some of which are being sold by Nagel in Stuttgart on April 19-20.

The moderate estimates will surely appeal to the bidders. Among the notable pieces is a horizontal table clock from the early 18th century. The glazed gilt brass case contains a verge movement, striking on a bell fixed under the movement and has a guide of €4000-7000.

It is signed Johann Kürschel in Schäßburg, a small town in what is now Romania and called Segesvar/Sighișoara. Little is known about Kürschel (Kirschel), other than that he was a member of a prominent family; he is certainly related to and conceivably identical with the Johann Kürschel who is known to have fitted a turret clock in the local castle with a striking mechanism and moving figures in 1648. That clock is still working today, albeit with an electrical movement.

Modern taste

The Franco-Turkish painter Osman Hamdi Bey bridged the gap between Orient and Occident and is regarded as the first exponent of modern Turkish painting.

His works are internationally sought after, a fact reflected in the guide of €1m-1.4m for his 2ft 4in x 18in (68 x 45cm) canvas Looking in a Mirror on offer at Dorotheum in Vienna on May 2.

Hamdi Bey had originally been sent to Paris in 1860 by his father, the Grand Vizier Ibrahim Edhem Pasha, to study law. Before long, however, he had abandoned his studies and taken up painting. Among his teachers were the Orientalist Gustave Boulanger and the history painter Jean-Léon Gérôme, both of whom recognised his talent.

Hamdi Bey's first appearance at the Paris Salon was in 1865, but only in the form of two portraits that Boulanger had painted of his pupil. In the following years, he was a regular participant at the Paris Salons and world fairs with his own paintings, enjoying considerable success.

In 1882, Hamdi Bey founded the Institute of Fine Arts in Istanbul, so that Turkish painters could study art in their home country and not have to travel to Europe. The painting in the Vienna sale was created around this time and combines Oriental motifs with European techniques; it is one of a series of portraits of young women, dressed in the fashion of the day. The vendor is an Italian collector.

Captivated by the Mediterranean light

On numerous occasions in the early part of the 20th century, the French artist Armand Guillaumin visited the picturesque medieval seaside village of Le Brusuc, between Marseille and Toulon.

He was following in the footsteps of his famous colleagues Pierre-Auguste Renoir, Eugène Boudin and Paul Signac, all of whom were inspired by the Mediterranean landscape and captivated by the light.

Van Ham in Cologne is selling this 10 x 13in (25 x 33cm) oil painting of Le Brusuc by Guillaumin from c.1901 on May 16-17, guided at €12,000-18,000.

By that time, Guillaumin could already look back on a long career as an artist, even though he never achieved the fame of his long-time friends Paul Cézanne and Camille Pissarro.

In 1863 all three had participated at the first Salon des Refusés, which was established after the official Paris Salon had rejected almost two thirds of the entries by Impressionist artists who were considered to be far too revolutionary for the public of the day. As things turned out, the alternative salon was a phenomenal success, with over 1000 visitors a day, and marked the beginning of many great artistic careers.

It's auction No 100

Ethnographica specialist Zemanek-Münster in Würzburg is holding its 100th auction on April 15 and has taken in some impressive pieces for the landmark.

Among them is a 19in (48cm) high royal caryatid lupona stool from the Luba people of the Congo. Such stools were used exclusively by the rulers of the Luba and were symbols of their power. They had a central function at the investiture of a new ruler and were also thought to contain the spirits of previous rulers.

The provenance of this stool can be traced back to Lieutenant Albert Linke who was a member of the so-called Schutztruppe, the German colonial protection force in German East Africa from May 1902 until 1909, when he returned to Germany. His time in Africa is well documented through numerous photographs, several of which show the stool in his camp at Bismarcksburg (now: Kasanga) on the shores of Lake Tanganyika.

The estimate is €15,000.

Finally took a shot at sculpture

William Wauer was a man of many facets. After studying in Dresden, Berlin and Leipzig, he initially worked as an art critic for the periodical XX Jahrhundert (The 20th Century), before turning his hand to publishing, illustrating and advertising.

He subsequently worked as a theatre and film director. At some time he began to devote himself to creating sculptures that combined elements of Expressionism, Cubism and Futurism. From 1918 onwards, he regularly exhibited at the legendary Berlin gallery Der Sturm (The Storm), run by the dynamic publisher and art patron Herwarth Walden.

A typical example of Wauer's work is coming up for sale at Lehr in Berlin on April 29. Der Steinstoßer (The Shot-Putter) is a 14in (36cm) high bronze with a golden-brown patina and expected to bring €5000.

Like all of Wauer's bronzes, it was cast by the foundry of Wilhelm Füssel in Berlin and is number four of an edition of seven. Herwarth Walden once said that Wauer "created absolute sculpture"; on April 29, we shall see if the bidders in Berlin are equally enthusiastic.

Artist's Resale Right

Advertisements in Antiques Trade Gazette may mention Artist's Resale Right (ARR). Here is how it is applied'

Living artists and the descendants of artists deceased within the last 70 years are entitled to receive a resale royalty each time their work is bought. The right applies only when the sale price reaches or exceeds the sterling equivalent of €1,000 and is calculated on a sliding scale.

Please note ARR is calculated in euros.

Auctioneers will apply current exchange rates.

Royalty	Resale price up to €50,000
4%
3%	between €50,000.01 and €200,000
1%	between €200,000.01 and €350,000
0.5%	between €350,000.01 and €500,000
0.25%	in excess of €500,000

Royalties are also capped so that the total amount of the royalty paid for any single sale of a work cannot exceed €12,500. ARR is exempt of VAT.

Fond memories of the festival

Dealers look back at the huge Peterborough event now holding its last showground venue staging

by Joan Porter

Jeremy Garner of TwoJays Antiques is one of the traders saddened by the announcement that the April edition of the biannual Peterborough Festival of Antiques at the East of England Showground will be its last.

“Long before I ever thought of becoming a dealer I visited the festival as a collector.

“I was in awe of the range of wonderful, curious and beautiful antiques and always found another fabulous piece to add to my collection,” said Garner.

“Since becoming a dealer in 2019 the festival was the first major fair I stood at and the excitement from buying from so many dealers there and the sales I made spurred me on as a new dealer.”

Last at the venue

The event on Friday and Saturday, April 7-8, is the last at the showground venue. This is because of the bringing forward of a £50m housing and leisure resort development, meaning organiser IACF can no longer use the site.

News about the end of the festival followed the shock revelation that the IACF fairs at Alexandra Palace in London were also closing. However, the Ally Pally event has now happily been resurrected under new management.

Launched in 1999 at the showground by Bob Evans Fairs and handed over to IACF in 2019, the Peterborough festival brought together hundreds of dealers and collectors – a “highlight of the year,” said one dealer this week.

Go-to place

Decoratives dealer Jo Roberts, a regular buyer at IACF fairs, said: “Like many dealers I am sad to see the closure of the festival as it was always one of the go-to places to find a wonderful breadth of items. Its loss will be keenly felt.”

Top-end kitchenalia dealer Michael Wilton did not attend last September’s festival due to his wife’s ill health. He said: “She has sadly passed away but I have rebooked for the Easter fair as she would have wanted me to carry on.”

He added: “It will be an emotional fair as we have a large client base

Although Boris is too fragile to travel he is for sale for £350 at Riverside Antiques, an antiques centre in Sawbridgeworth, Hertfordshire, where Murphy has two units.

I was in awe of the range of antiques who only attend this festival, especially overseas buyers.”

General dealer Kev Kingsley also voiced his disappointment, saying “that it was such a good fair to do”. However, looking on the positive side, he hoped it would encourage more visitors to IACF Newark, an hour’s drive away, a view emphasised by Will Thomas, IACF’s managing director. ■

More Easter Weekend options for a fair visit

Grandma's Attic Antiques Fairs is fielding two antiques and collectors' fairs on the same day in locations 30 miles apart on Monday, April 10.

Organiser Chris Brown said: "Our fair at Eastleigh already has 200 stalls booked. We launched this on New Year's Day and had more than 1500 visitors so we're hoping for another busy one."

"The antique and collectors' fair at Wimborne has been running for more than 30 years and is one of the most popular small fairs in our calendar."

The venues are: Places Leisure Centre in the Hampshire town of Eastleigh and the Allendale Centre in Wimborne, Dorset.

► grandmasatticfairs.co.uk

The monthly Cheltenham Antiques and Vintage Market spreads out along the tree-lined Promenade and Long Gardens in the centre of the town with the next on Saturday, April 8.

Organiser Jonathan Nixon, who also runs antiques markets in Wembley and Bath, said: "We're pleased with the market and it's great to see 50 dealers stalling out there every month. Attracting decorative dealers such as Chapter Two Antiques, Fox & Peel and Antique Gent has added a real twist to the event and we've seen great support from trade buyers and local interior designers."

The weather is always a big element for fairs with outdoor pitches.

Sue Ede said of her Shepton Fleamarket at the Royal Bath and West Showground on Sunday, April 9: "The two Shepton fleas so far have been significantly busier this year over last and with good weather, it should be a bumper Easter Sunday, in excess of 5000 visitors and more than 400 stallholders."

Ede added: "The appetite for buying and selling seems stronger than ever. It's very exciting to see business come roaring back this year."

Churchill will be making an appearance in Petersfield at Sara Hughes' vintage, antiques and militaria fair this Sunday, April 2, at the Petersfield Hall.

Local author Rupert Wieloch, who writes about the interplay between politics, war and diplomacy, will be signing copies of his latest books: Churchill's Abandoned Prisoners and Liberating Libya.

Militaria features on two stands at the 20-plus stall fair, offering out-of-print books as well as the Napoleonic Society selling books about the period.

In Worcestershire, Helen Yourston, director of B2B Events, is gearing up for the much-visited fleamarket at the Three Counties Showground in Malvern on Monday, April 10.

"Easter is our first big one of the year and our casual outdoor pitches can number up to 400 if the weather behaves. We are full indoors with 290 exhibitors," she said.

Not riverside... is the Henley Showground, the new location at Hambledon, near Henley, for the Henley Décor Fair which runs from April 13-16. In our piece last week (ATG No 2585) on the fair we described the showground as being "by the River Thames." Sorry about that.

Correction:

In last week's ATG (issue 2585) on page 59 a letter by Gavin Littaur stated that the number of Id Black postage stamps printed was 80 million.

We had missed before deadline an update sent to us by the same letter writer to correct this figure to nearly 69 million. We are pleased to set the record straight here.
